Subject: Seeking clarification

Hello.

I'm seeking clarification as to how the Real ID will be effected at airports.

I understand the issues with some states needing to be in compliance by Jan 10. Does this mean that on Jan 10, air travelers from these states will be required to furnish other forms of ID such as passports?

I read something about 120 days enforcement. What exactly does this mean?

Thanks !!!

Thank you for contacting the Office of State Issued ID Support.

We have not set the date for REAL ID enforcement at the airports except for notifying the public that the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will continue to accept driver's licenses and state-issued identification cards from all jurisdictions at least until 2016. DHS will ensure the public has ample advanced notice before identification requirements for boarding aircraft change. That notice will include information on the process for individuals with a non-compliant driver's license or identification card to be able to travel by aircraft.

You can find an acceptable list of ID's for airline travel from TSA here:
<http://www.tsa.gov/traveler-information/acceptable-ids>

If a child is younger than 18, they are not required to have ID to travel. They'll just need their boarding pass.

The REAL ID Act is being enforced as we speak. The state of California has received an extension for 2016 however, Illinois has not and therefore subject to enforcement.

Presenting an IL Driver's License should cause the guards to ask for an alternate id, such as a passport, or have an alternate procedure in place.

The facility in CA should be able to state those requirements to you.

Thank you,

Hi there, I travel periodically for work and have a few trips planned for January & March already for 2016.

I do not have a passport at this time. I was told that if I apply for an enhanced ID that I wouldn't have any issue boarding flights. I have applied for the enhanced ID this week, but it's taking 6 weeks for processing.

Now, after reading some articles floating around on Facebook, it almost sounds like the enhanced ID will not be enough and that I will really need a passport. Is that true?

Can you please provide me with some guidance until MN can get their act together? I don't want to get stranded or not be allowed on a flight because of this....especially since I travel with the President of my company.

I have an up to date passport but my husband needs to renew his, and his passport expired in 2004. So it is unlikely that his will be renewed in time although he is starting the process.

We have read that we would have received 120 days notice if this is affecting our travel plans, but we also see that on your website that IL has not received a continuance and as of January 10th it must conform by the new rules. We would appreciate some clarifications as to our options for appropriate ID come January 17th.

I have heard that some state ID is not qualified for air travel this Jan 10, 2016; however some sources said that may be affected.

Therefore I would like to know more information about the real ID. I have a Washington State driver license, not enhanced once. So I still be use it as a standalone document for commercial air travel after Jan 10, 2016.

Hello!

I am seeking assistance in understanding with Missouri being non-compliant with the Real ID Rule, will Missouri Driver's Licenses and Identification Cards still be considered acceptable for CIP Programs? Please let me know if we will need to change our program or direct me to the proper reference tool.

Here is an article recently released regarding Missouri Driver's Licenses.

As you may be aware, The Associated Press reported last week that your department has told Missouri (and other states) that the exemption from the "REAL ID" law for state driver's licenses won't be continued past Jan. 10 (at least, for Missouri).

I'm working on a follow-up story to that AP story (copied below), to give my readers in Mid-Missouri a sense of HOW your change will/could affect them.

I have looked at the FAQs on your website (www.dhs.gov/real-id-public-faqs) and can use some of those answers in my story.

But I wanted to get more specific, if possible.

at least 120-day advance notice before barring people from flights who have driver's licenses from states that are noncompliant or lack a waiver.

"As we continue the phased in enforcement of the REAL ID Act, the consequences of continued noncompliance will grow with each milestone," the department said in its letter to Missouri.

AP reporter Carla K. Johnson in Chicago contributed to this report.

We have not set the date for REAL ID enforcement at the airports except for notifying the public that the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will continue to accept driver's licenses and state-issued identification cards from all jurisdictions at least until 2016. DHS will ensure the public has ample advanced notice before identification requirements for boarding aircraft change. That notice will include information on the process for individuals with a non-compliant driver's license or identification card to be able to travel by aircraft.

You can find an acceptable list of ID's for airline travel from TSA here:

Subject:	Question's on Washington State Commercial Air Travel After Jan 10, 2016
Date:	2015/12/29 15:11:39
Type:	Note

We are a Travel Agency in Washington State and we need clarification on Commercial Air Travel acceptable ID after January 10, 2016. Per the below dhs.gov website information, please find our questions below in red.

The following states/territories have not received an extension for 2016 and will be subject to enforcement beginning Jan. 10, 2016.

- Illinois
- Missouri
- New Mexico
- Washington

“Phase 4: Boarding federally regulated commercial aircraft. A driver's license or identification card from a noncompliant state may only be used in conjunction with an acceptable second form of ID for boarding federally regulated commercial aircraft.” What is considered an “acceptable second form of ID” for Washington State commercial air travel departures? Is it the below TSA list?

TSA's List.

Adult passengers 18 and over must show valid identification at the airport checkpoint in order to travel.

- Driver's licenses or other state photo identity cards issued by Department of Motor Vehicles (or equivalent) For Washington State, will the standard Driver's licenses be removed from this list after January 10, 2016 and the Enhanced Driver's Licenses (EDLs) be added? If so, travelers are already booking travel for January 10th and beyond. Shouldn't this be updated now?
- U.S. passport
- U.S. passport card
- DHS trusted traveler cards (Global Entry, NEXUS, SENTRI, FAST)
- U.S. military ID (active duty or retired military and their dependents, and DoD civilians)
- Permanent resident card
- Border crossing card
- DHS-designated enhanced driver's license
- Airline or airport-issued ID (if issued under a TSA-approved security plan)

Does this mean that after January 10, 2016 when traveling with a Illinois, Missouri, New Mexico or Washington “standard” driver’s license, travelers will be allowed to travel on commercial aircraft for 3-month’s with warning/notification?

Thank you in advance for clarification.

Subject: REAL ID State question and concerning your .gov website

Greetings

Im sending this email concerning on the REAL ID Act and something that has been bothering me because the website doesnt answer my question since the map with the states have a "#" null in the link if you click on the state, I live in Puerto Rico, the DTOP agency that deals with the identification cards have a very vague information on the REAL ID Act information concerning Puerto Rico and I wanted to know of the digital licenses id cards, the ones that are made of hard plastic and with a digital scan code in the back passes the real ID requirements since they say it was part of the process during 2008. And if the extension for the id given to Puerto Rico that ends in January 10, 2016 are the ones for the ID's that are not like the one i mentioned but for the ones that are provisional and made of laminated plastic that is easily bended??? My ID is the hard digital ones with the bar code in the rear that was issued in 2010.

Thanks in advance and have a nice day.

Thank you for contacting the Office of State Issued ID Support.

We have not set the date for REAL ID enforcement at the airports except for notifying the public that the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will continue to accept driver's licenses and state-issued identification cards from all jurisdictions at least until 2016. DHS will ensure the public has ample advanced notice before identification requirements for boarding aircraft change. That notice will include information on the process for individuals with a non-compliant driver's license or identification card to be able to travel by aircraft.

To whom may concern,

According to the establishment of the Real ID Act, states and territories must comply with the deadline established or had submitted an extension to be in compliance for travelers to be able to travel via airports. Now my questions is in regards to cruise ships. Does anyone who still not having a passport and who's state or territory still not in compliance, will that person be able to take that cruise?

I have a schedule cruise coming up in January 24 and even though my wife and I a passport, I have a little 2 yrs old daughter who doesn't and friends that will be on that cruise that don't have a passport yet. I would like some info on this issue. Thanks for your time.

I am currently planning on traveling in January for an internship I was selected for at Walt Disney World in Florida. I am a resident of Puerto Rico, and I was born in Oklahoma. All of the ID's I have have been issued here, except my birth certificate, which is from Oklahoma. Will I encounter any problems getting on my flight if all I have is my PR license, OK birth certificate and PR Social security card?

Also, I am traveling with my mother, and she does not have a passport either. She has a PR license and PR birth certificate.

Look forward to hearing back from you.

Greetings

Im sending this email concerning on the REAL ID Act and something that has been bothering me because the website doesnt answer my question since the map with the states have a "#" null in the link if you click on the state, I live in Puerto Rico, the DTOP agency that deals with the identification cards have a very vague information on the REAL ID Act information concerning Puerto Rico and I wanted to know of the digital licenses id cards, the ones that are made of hard plastic and with a digital scan code in the back passes the real ID requirements since they say it was part of the process during 2008. And if the extension for the id given to Puerto Rico that ends in January 10, 2016 are the ones for the ID's that are not like the one i mentioned but for the ones that are provisional and made of laminated plastic that is easily bended??? My ID is the hard digital ones with the bar code in the rear that was issued in 2010.

Thanks in advance and have a nice day.

Good Afternoon,

Colorado Springs Utilities allows U.S. States Drivers licenses to be used for physical access to facilities.

DHS website depicts that the following states are either in non-compliant or in grace period to Jan 2016: (Minnesota, Illinois, Missouri, New Mexico, Washington, and California)

Open source research shows the U.S. States listed by DHS in non-compliant status or under a grace period to Jan 2016, that their states drivers licenses meet the following components: person's name, person's photo, person's date of birth, and their signature.

Based on DHS Website, the states above are missing components in complying with the Real ID act and these drivers licenses may not be acceptable as proof for flying shortly (120 days).

Are these states not meeting the readable information or the acceptance of certain documents to prove U.S. citizenship?

Would you clarify as Colorado Springs Utilities does not want to accept a State Driver's license for physical access to facilities that is not acceptable by DHS.

Thank you.

Greetings,

A friend, will be traveling from Puerto Rico (PR) to Washington, DC the 1.7.2016. She will be heading back to PR on January 11,216. We plan and bought the flight tickets weeks ago. Her only ID is her PR Driven License.

Would she be able to travel back to PR after the new law starting on January 11,2016?using her PR Driven License?

Any information on this matter will be helpful.

I don't see this information on your website, but it was my understanding that if we issue a Real ID compliant driver's license, which Nebraska does, the license must be marked accordingly. Although the State of Mississippi is a Real ID compliant state (see your map) – they do not mark the license with any sort of indicator. What I find on your website is that if the state issues non-compliant documents – they must indicate that in the barcode on the back of the document. Nowhere on your website does it indicate that Real ID compliant cards must have a special marking on them. So do Real ID compliant cards need to have an indicator on them or not? If not – how will other states know they are Real ID compliant and when they became so (since no dates are on your map). Thank you very much for your help.

Thank you for contacting the Office of State Issued ID Support.

We have not set the date for REAL ID enforcement at the airports except for notifying the public that the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will continue to accept driver's licenses and state-issued identification cards from all jurisdictions at least until 2016. DHS will ensure the public has ample advanced notice before identification requirements for boarding aircraft change. That notice will include information on the process for individuals with a non-compliant driver's license or identification card to be able to travel by aircraft.

You can find an acceptable list of ID's for airline travel from TSA here:
<http://www.tsa.gov/traveler-information/acceptable-ids>

If a child is younger than 18, they are not required to have ID to travel. They'll just need their boarding pass.

Subject: correct identification for a child

what is the proper I.D. for a person under 16 (age they can receive a driver's license?)

How many I.D.'s does someone 16 or younger need to board a flight?

Thank you

Subject: Secondary ID question.

Would a passport card be considered a valid form of secondary government ID to fly or does one have to have the passport book? I only fly domestically.

Color coding the map would not comply with the law and those with visual impairments would not be able to see the differentiation. We are currently working with our website development team to make enhancements to our website. Please feel free to check back with the upcoming changes.

Subject: Real ID Map

Just a suggestion, but why does the Real ID map on State status require that users roll over every state to figure out what the status is? Why not just color code the map and put a legend on it. Every state and territory falls into a uniform category:

Compliant

Under review — grace period to at least January 10, 2016

Under review — grace period to June 1, 2016

Under review — grace period to October 10, 2016

Non-compliant — federal officials may accept IDs

Non-compliant

This would allow a user to capture all the info he or she needs at a glance.

Regards
